NOT CONTROLLED BY THE BIG INTERESTS

Do you want to abolish the insanitary tenement house and its immoral surroundings?

Do you want to help the Hawaiian and Portuguese laborer, who can not afford to pay rent for a house or cottage?

Do you want to assist him to a home with moral and healthful environments?

Do you want to assist him to bring up his children under conditions that will be conducive to health and happiness?

If so, listen to this:

Acreage property can be bought in good healthful localities on which neat, well built four-room cottages, including sanitary plumbing and bath, on lots 60x40 feet, for about $700 per house and lot.

This will allow a nice front yard and plenty of space on sides and rear of cottage.

Suppose now some philanthropist or even the government, if such a thing can be made legal, should build, say for argument sake, 1000 houses at a cost of $700,000.

We will say that bonds are issued at 5 per cent for ten years to raise this money. To pay this off in ten years requires a sinking fund of $70,000 per year and $35,000 per year for interest.

This would mean that each cottage must produce $105 per year or less than $9 per month to pay for itself in ten years.

At the present time the laborer who works for $8.25 per week can not afford to pay for a house to live in at the exorbitant rents that are being charged. Consequently he is compelled to live with his family in tenement quarters, where he pays $2 per week for a single room, being as much as he would pay for a cottage if there was no middle-man to get the big profit as outlined above.

Just think what it would mean to the poor laborer if for the same money that he pays for squalid tenement quarters, herded together with Filipinos, Koreans, Porto Ricans and others, he could get a nice cottage with a garden in front and a comfortable lanai upon which to sit of an evening when his day's work is done.

And best of all: at the end of ten years he will own his own home, having paid for it at the rate of $9.00 or $10.00 per month. Consider what an uplift this would be for this man. Don't you think it would tend to the physical, mental and moral advancement of himself, his family and his posterity? Some governments do this now. Why not Hawaii?

This is one of the things I should like to bring about for the U. P. LIFT OF LABOR.

REPUBLICANS TOUR ISLAND

Republican fireworks were rnsferred today to precincts outside the city. The G. O. P. candidates and campaign leaders left early this morning for an auto tour of the island, from which some of them will not return until tomorrow.

Chairman B. von Damm of the county committee was at the head of the Republican battle-front which moved on Waiakoa early this morning via the Pali road. Nearly all of the county and a large number of the legislative candidates are in the party.

At Kaneohe they addressed the voters at 10 o'clock this morning. From there they went to Kahana, Hauula and Hale, and arrive at Waiakoa at 6 o'clock this evening.

Oscar Cox, the political leader of Waiakoa, will preside at the mass meeting, arranged for tonight. The employees of the plantation, it is expected, will be present, a special train it is said, having been provided for them by the management.

The Montenegrins captured the Turkish stronghold on Datchitch mountain. The other Balkan states have not declared war, but it is believed that the delay is part of the strategic plan of the coalition.

MANY MEETINGS FOR THE VOTERS

Before enthusiastic gatherings of the voters last night, the Republican candidates who spoke at the two meetings one at Palace Square, and the other at the corner of Nuuanu and Jack Lane, were greeted with cheers and applause.

The attendance at Palace Square was large, there being a number of the Democratic and Home Rule runners present to listen to the arguments of the Republican speakers.

The meeting at the Pumping Station was attended by 350 or 400 people and there was considerable enthusiasm.

The Democratic meeting at the corner of Nuuanu and Jack Lane last night was attended largely by the women and children. There were about thirty-five voters present. With the exception of H. M. Kanoho, the "Canon Ball of Kohala," the speakers received no enthusiastic applause from the electorate.

Up at Pauoa valley last night, the Democrats held another meeting. Most of the spectators, according to the reports, were children and women. Late in the evening, however, a number of men arrived and stayed until the adjournment of the meeting.

This evening, the Democratic nominees will hold a political meeting at Puuloa. They will return at midnight.

CROWDS GREET REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGNERS OVER MAUI

(Special Star-Bulletin Correspondent.)

WAILUKU, Oct. 18.—Maui politicians have certainly been exceedingly busy the last ten days. On Monday large meetings were held at Lahaina and Honokohau. The interest in all the speeches was keen. Prince Kuhio spoke along very much the same lines as he had in Honolulu. Robert W. Shingle held the attention of the large number of men, as he outlined what he believed to be the policy of the party this year. The local politicians running for office were heard, at least some of them, for the first time. George P. Cooke of Molokai always makes a good stump speech. He is well known on the Lanaina side of Maui, and is always welcomed. T. B. Penhallow, manager of Wailuku Sugar company, who is running for senatorship of Maui, made his maiden speech in Lahaina, Hawaii, and took his stand boldly for what he believes the party needed. He was progressive in his ideas, and his speech was a calm presentation of the high ideals that so many men in politics today hold. Rev. Stephen L. Desha made a strong address, urging all men to be faithful to the Prince at the county election.

Most of the party came to Wailuku for the big rally on Tuesday night. There was hardly standing room in the Orpheum. Robert W. Shingle was the first speaker. He made an unusually strong presentation of Republicanism in which he pointed out how Hawaii had prospered under the party. He praised the Prince for the excellent work the latter had done in Congress.

The next speaker was R. W. Breckons, who made a forceful argument in presenting what the Republicans had done. He urged every man to vote for the party that had accomplished things in the past, as the first speaker had praised the Prince so did Breckons also give him his highest commendation to the people and expected hearty support for him in the coming election.

Kuhio Makes Good Impression. Prince Kuhio made a very favorable impression upon his hearers. His English speech was excellent. He briefly referred to the position of L. L. McCandless against him, and he made some reference to his charges against Governor Frear, saying that he had gone into the matter of protesting because he desired the home-stead laws to be carried out fully for the sole benefit of Hawaii.

He pleased his audience when he said, "If you don't think I am the right man for the place, don't vote for me, but if you think I am the right man, then I ask you to vote for me."

For the first two speakers Rev. Stephen L. Desha interpreted. The Prince spoke first in Hawaiian and then in English.

The rally at Puunene on Wednesday night was a great affair. Fully five hundred seats had been arranged in the tennis court. They were nearly all taken by people from all parts of Central Maui. Special trains had been run for the occasion. Hundreds were standing up, so it is safe to say fully 500 people heard the speeches of the evening.

The stage was erected on the Kahului side of the court. Yala's orchestra played during the first part of the evening, while the people were gathered. At about eight o'clock the long file of Republican office-seekers with the committee of the evening and Duke Kahanamoku took their places on the platform amid the cheering of the crowd. Frank F. Baldwin, chairman of the meeting, called the people to order and introduced Prince Kuhio, who spoke in English first, and then in Hawaiian. He made a fine appearance and his voice carried splendidly so that every one of his big out-of-door audience heard all he said. His speech was along much the same line as at Wailuku the night before. He said again that he had taken his position against the administration sincerely, believing that the American people wanted to see this Territory Americanized, and he thought that sufficiently strong efforts in that direction had not been made. He spoke also in a very feeling way concerning the franchise, and believed that the time might come when we would have a Commission form of Government, unless we as a people lived up to our privileges as citizens, and tried to show to the great American people that we were sincerely Americans, desiring only the best form of government for the territory, and that Hawaii be Americanized.

Rev. Stephen L. Desha made a powerful speech in which he eulogized the memory of his friend, Hon. H. P. Baldwin, and urged all the voters of Maui to support the excellent candidates for the offices for which they were running. His speech was flowery. His voice was in better shape than when he was in Lahaina, and he carried his audience with him every step of the way.

Chairman Baldwin then introduced W. T. Rawlins, who is accompanying Duke Kahanamoku to Maui. Mr. Rawlins told briefly what the Duke had accomplished and thanked the people for their generous support of him in his contests in the States and in Europe.

Mr. Rawlins then made a little political speech of his own in which he scored McCandless' attack upon Prince Kuhio.

The speeches lasted a little over an hour, then all the visitors were admitted to the swimming pool enclosure where the Duke gave a half hour exhibition for the benefit of the Maui people. Mr. Rawlins explained the different strokes that the Duke was exhibiting. This proved of decided interest to the crowd, and the Duke was roundly applauded.

Rally at Huelo. The Prince, Mr. Desha, and the Maui office-seekers, together with several of the strong political men of Maui who are not on the ticket left on Thursday afternoon for Huelo, where they held a rally that evening. From Huelo the party will pass to Kaanana, Nahiaku, Hana, Kipahulu Kaupo and back through Upalapala on Thursday next returning in time to catch the boat that evening. The weather is most favorable to the trip. It is expected that the crowds will be unusually large. Never were the rallies more orderly than this year; the speakers have all made excellent impressions upon the Maui people by their sincerity, their straight forward appeal and their conviction that the Republican platform is worthy of the earnest support of all loyal citizens.

C. H. COOKE GETTING SUPPORT FOR HOUSE

C. H. COOKE

Among the Republican nominees, not one is receiving more general approbation from the voters of all parties than C. H. Cooke, candidate on the Republican ticket for representative from the Fourth district.

Born in Hawaii, and devoted to Hawaii's interests, Mr. Cooke is recognized as the type of man both by inclination and training who will make a fine record in the legislature. He was born in Honolulu, April 17, 1876 and is a graduate of Oahu College and later Yale University. His long experience in business has fitted him to take a leading part in the financial work of the legislature which promises to be unusually heavy next year. He succeeded his father the late C. M. Cooke, at the head of the Bank of Hawaii and has maintained its record for business progress.

As a member of the liquor license board, Mr. Cooke has established a reputation for impartiality and faithfulness in the discharge of his duties. During the present campaign he has been greeted everywhere he went by assurances of cordial support from the voters. He is known to stand for a "square deal for all," and that's what the people want.

WAY IS FOUND TO EVADE LAW

Beer Flows Like Water, Though Sunday Is "Dry"

Liquor of every brand was purchasable yesterday by bluejackets, and the result was that the town was filled with half-intoxicated men.

The liquor commissioners have issued an edict against Sunday liquor selling and Honolulu is supposed to be a dry town on the Sabbath, but yesterday was an exception, and the surprise of it all was that there was no attempt made to conceal the fact that booze was on tap.

The beer came in kegs, casks and bottles from the local brewery. Bluejackets went down in backs, buggies, surreys, autos and express wagons and carried away beer in all kinds of containers. The men laughed when anybody suggested a dry Sunday.

The bluejackets stole a march on the commissioners by getting orders on the brewery from various downtown saloons for beer for Sunday delivery. They say they paid the money to the saloons and received orders on the brewery, which when presented brought them the quantity of beer they paid for. The beer was carried about in vehicles and thirsts were quenched whenever the owners of the kegs felt like getting around a foaming stein.

Blind pigs were in active operation all day and late into the night. Inspector Fennell found a large number of places where booze was being distributed, but it was mostly beer, and those in charge of the kegs said they had purchased them from the saloons on brewery deliveries.

Inquiry at the brewery yesterday afternoon elicited the information that beer was being furnished to persons bringing orders from saloons. There was no secrecy regarding the dispensing of the liquor and sailors, equipped with orders from downtown saloons, had only to call, present their orders and take away the beer.

One party of bluejackets secured an express wagon, on which the men loaded two kegs of beer. The kegs were tapped, spigots were inserted, and the sailors drove through the streets of the city. Whenever they saw a man in uniform who looked thirsty, they would stop, one of them would jump to the ground, draw a glass of beer and invite the dry one to quaff.

One of the chief forms of amusement consisted of throwing empty bottles into the streets, and chauffeurs and others had considerable difficulty avoiding the dangerous debris. Kalakaua avenue looked like the remains of a glass-blowing establishment after an explosion, and the drivers of motor cars were forced to negotiate the roadway very gingerly last night.

As the liquor law says nothing about the drinking of intoxicants in restaurants on Sunday, so long as the goods are not sold there, the downtown restaurants were the scenes of considerable tipping. The quantity of liquor drunk at the Union Grill was far greater than was ever sold on a Sunday in the days when restaurants were allowed the Sunday and over-hour privileges.

There seemed to be a general feeling among the citizens that something should be done to regulate the consumption of liquor in public places on Sundays and after hours.

This Just Three Years Ago. The Brewery Is Under Same Management.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

The following candidates for license to practice law will be given the bar examination beginning October 25: J. B. Lightfoot, H. Gooding Field, Albert F. Hall and Donald McClure.

Assistant Attorney General Arthur G. Smith leaves next Wednesday for Hilo to represent the Territory in an ejectment suit, brought by the Territory in an effort to widen Front street in that city.

John Gomes was committed to jail this morning by Circuit Judge Whitney to be held not to exceed thirty days, or until the payment of $10 alimony due his divorced wife for the maintenance of his child.

Roosevelt is stirring up Wisconsin by slamming La Follette, and Johnson has awakened the Quakers with violent denunciations of Senator Penrose.
